AS you read this book remember that those who advertise here have made it possible to produce the book. They have taken advertising space as a business proposition and it is the duty of Rutgers men to see that the investment is profitable to them.

You can trade as economically in New Brunswick as you can in New York and there are agents in town for all standard sporting goods. You pay exactly the same prices as those asked by the manufacturers and in many cases save shipping expenses.

Be fair, and help those who have helped you.

COURSES OF STUDY

THE College offers courses leading to the degrees of A. B., Litt. B. and B. Sc. Under the last are included a general science course, and technical science courses in Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, Chemistry, Ceramics, Agriculture, and Biology. The A. B., the Litt. B., and the general science courses permit large freedom in the choice of electives and provide liberal preparatory training for the professions of law, medicine, theology, teaching, and journalism. The technical science courses are designed to prepare for industrial positions of leadership, except the course in Biology, which aims to give a liberal training in the sciences, and is especially appropriate as a preliminary to the study of medicine. Short courses, not leading to a degree, are offered in Ceramics and in Agriculture

QUEENS FROM NELSON CAMPUS

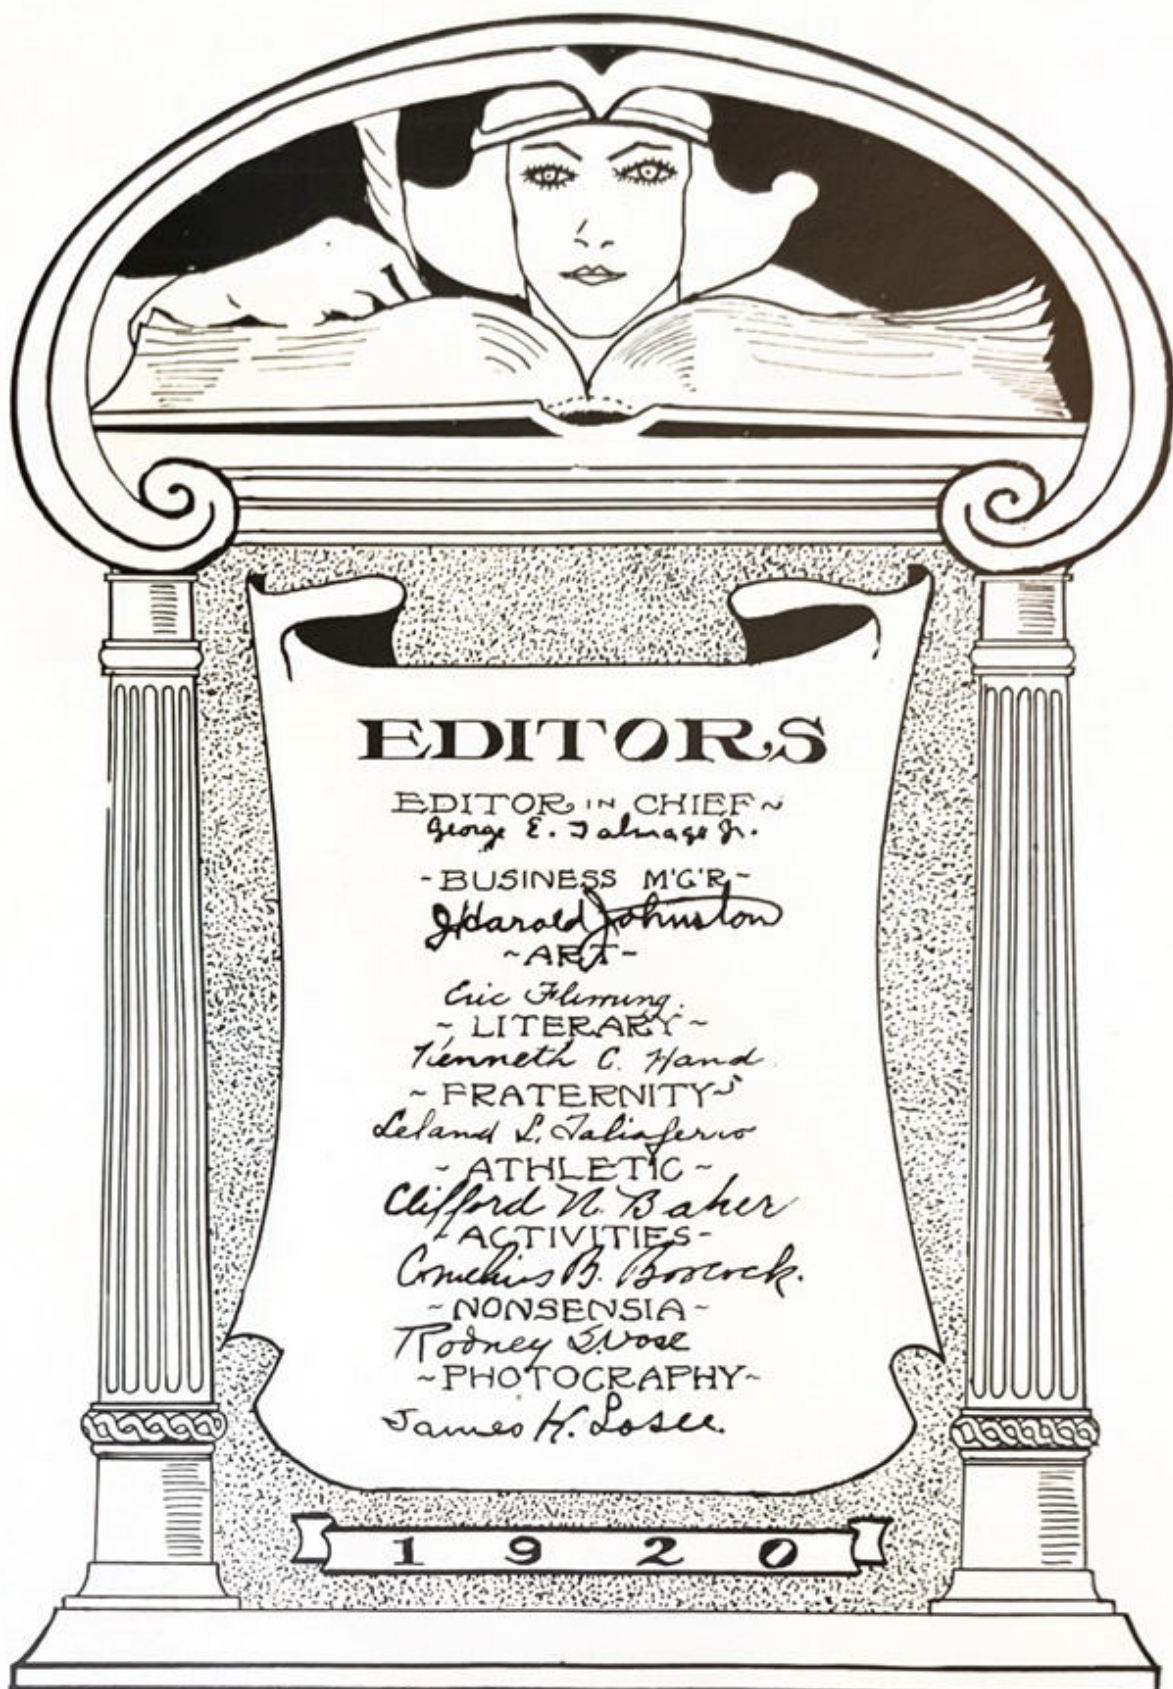

F O R E W O R D

WITH the war now ended, and college once more assuming its normal life and activities we find ourselves facing a new outlook. A great crisis has been passed, both by the nation and by the college. It is for us, the under-graduates, to see the difference between the past and the future, and to strive and give, that the fame of Old Rutgers may spread far and wide, even as those loyal sons of Alma Mater to whom we so proudly dedicate this book gave their all. Let our motto be "Unselfish and Unswerving Loyalty."

For the faults of this book we ask your pardon. We have done the best that time and circumstances would permit; we trust that it will prove a satisfactory history of the year.

History of the Class of 1919

The Class of 1919 has experienced many vicissitudes during its four years at Rutgers. Its history is at once the most diverse, the most complex, and the most interesting of any class history in the past decade—due, in part, to the great national crisis, and in part to the nature of the class itself.

On September 22, 1915, the Class of 1919, unmindful of the future, began its college career by annihilating the Sophomores in the first combat of the year. From the first day the motto of the Class of 1919 was that they would not be denied, with the result that no class has ever equalled its record. During this year seven men made the Varsity football squad, the fall track meet was an overwhelming victory for the Freshmen, and the tennis, the mandolin and glee clubs, the debating teams and, in fact, every college activity was represented by a larger number of Freshmen than ever before. Our Freshman year was one triumph after another, with the result that the Sophomores soon gave up all hope of ruling us with an iron hand.

During our Sophomore year, we continued to show what the Class of 1919 was really made up of. The Freshmen, although they had larger numbers, were completely subdued in the rushes due to the great fighting spirit and the class loyalty which forever pervaded the class of 1919. The Hop that year will ever be remembered as a remarkable achievement in the history of the social life of Rutgers. Our banquet in New York was a great success, the class turning out en masse. In athletics, scholarship and other college activities, the Class of 1919 was blazing a trail which will serve as a goal for future classes to attain.

In the Fall of 1917, our class suffered greatly because our country entered the Great World War that the principle of democracy might live. Many of our fellows were missing, having entered the service of the U. S. A. Throughout this year, which was without a doubt the hardest year that a Rutgers class ever endured, we did our best to further the interests of our Alma Mater in every way possible. Many left in the Spring to work on farms or to do some other work which was essential for carrying on the war to a successful end.

As Seniors our ranks were depleted to a larger extent than they had been before. The college was under governmental jurisdiction and the S. A. T. C. was started. More than ever, we realized that we not only owed ourselves a certain duty but moreover, we owed our country a certain duty which we intended to fulfill to the best of our ability. On December 14 the S. A. T. C. was disbanded as the war was now over. After the Christmas holidays, a new semester began and the old college life again came into its own. Many of our fellows returned to college and we all took up again our life as a class with its glories and unprecedented past.

This is the history of the Class of 1919—a class which saw opportunity staring it in the face and never once shut its eyes to daylight, but forever grasped the opportunity when it presented itself. We came to Rutgers to become men and we have become men, true Rutgers men with a purpose in life which will be striven for with the same relentless fighting spirit that has characterized the Class of 1919 throughout its four years of college life at Rutgers.

Pep, pep, pep a plenty,

Rah, rah, Rutgers,

1920.

History of the Class of 1920

THE Junior Year of the Class of 1920 opened amidst very extraordinary conditions. The Students' Army Training Corps absorbed our interest. Old Rutgers was under government control. Under this regime, the activities of a normal college year were not possible. But by Christmas, conditions had changed. The great armistice had been signed and our college was again free to continue on its normal way.

When we look back upon our entrance into college, we well remember our first rushes and how the wonderful spirit of our class was then born. We did not win every rush, neither did we lose them all but these experiences served their purpose—they instilled into us the "pep" that has been our's ever since.

The Class of 1920 formed a very substantial part of the football team that first year. And later in basketball, track and baseball our class more than held its own. The college has come to recognize 1920 as a very substantial unit in her athletic life.

We might mention in detail our two annual banquets but we will merely touch on them by saying that they both were indeed successes. To the latter one was lent an added zest by the fact that our illustrious president was kid-napped by the rapacious Freshmen but easily escaped from them when he tired of their company.

The Sophomore Hop conducted by the Class of '20 under somewhat handicapped circumstances proved a success in every way. The spirit of the class was duly manifest and those who participated in the dance were indeed fortunate.

The true beginning of the Junior Year was after the S. A. T. C. regime had passed. We had lost many a good man to join the ranks of those serving their country and some of these made the supreme sacrifice. Chester Curtis Cubberly, Harry Morris Hansen, Michael H. Hirshman, William Gray, and Herbert Onyx Tilton died in the service of their country. Their memory will be hallowed by the Class of 1920 and by Rutgers forever. We may well be proud of our service record.

The loss of time occasioned by the S. A. T. C. was to be regretted, but 1920 pressed forward with renewed vigor after her enforced idleness had ceased. The same old "pep" was prevalent and the first opportunity offered showed that it had become stronger than ever before. This opportunity was the Junior Prom.

Probably the biggest and the most successful dance ever staged at Rutgers, the "Junior" of '20, will ever remain in the memories of its participants. The wonderful decorations, the soothing, swaying music, the delicious refreshments were indeed of the highest order, while the elite guests in their charming gowns added to the beauty of the scene. Everyone and everything was in tune to make the occasion par excellence.

The history of 1920 to the present time has been most extraordinary. Beginning its career amid seething, active, normal college life, the war came and college was badly crippled. Our Sophomore Year took place entirely during the war period and the prospects of our Junior Year were indeed black at this time. The S. A. T. C. entirely destroyed class unity. But now normal conditions have returned. This year sees old Rutgers reinstated in her right position. Next year will see our Alma Mater experiencing one of the successful periods of her history. The Class of 1920 will then be in the place of leadership. Its task will be heavy, its responsibility great, its challenge stupendous. Will it meet these demands? With unstinted effort, with unswerving endeavor, it will attempt to execute these demands fully and completely. With its wonderful spirit, it will succeed.

HISTORIAN.

FRANK STERLING ALLMUTH

"Al" "Stirk"

Stirk hails from Paterson, the home of other great Rutgers men. 'Tis said that he is a pirate on the lake in the summer. At present, however, he spends his time pickling cats. He aspires to be a doctor, but let us hope that when he settles down there will be a scarcity of ministers in the neighborhood.

BRUCE WALKER ANGUS

Nature called Bruce from the banks of the Passaic to the banks of the Raritan. Between the Navy and his Ag course he feels that he will be able to write an essay entitled, "The Morris Canal, the Passaic and Raritan Rivers are more than Streams of Mind."

HENRY VERNON ASPINALL

"Aspy"

This is a finished product from the island of Firtheliff, N. Y. It is rumored that the only profession lacking there, is of Electrical Engineer, but the tales of college will be more acceptable at the country. Aspy with his partner below were during the S. A. T. C.-N. C. O. I. C. O. Q.

JOHN CHARLES AYDELOTT

This innocent looking youth grew up with several cornstalks in Illinois. At home he is considered a choice celebrity of the west, but at Rutgers he is merely a Phi-jake maniac.

CLIFFORD NELSON BAKER

"Bake" "Cliff"

West Point had the benefit of a year of Cliff's life. Then the Navy needed him. If we could only make him realize that the farm back home, and South Amboy are less important than football, we could feel that when he leaves us, he will not act as guide and chaperone to parties of young ladies travelling abroad.

EDWIN WILLIAM BARBEHENN

"Barbe"

To say the least this prince of darkness is a gentleman. He is the shepherd of a flock in Jersey City, and spends most of his time in college exposing his nakedness on the track and teaching us new ideas. We predict a great future for him.

CORNELIUS BRETT BOOCOCK

"Booch"

This curly-haired son of a minister is a free lance. He typifies the intense individualistic spirit, as Dr. Whitman would say, and is of the razor backed variety, with grim visage and a gruff voice. Booch is balky and rather rude when he plays tennis.

EMANUEL BREITKOFF

When New Brunswick High School tired of this, Rutgers offered opportunities. He plays the violin when not working for Kitty.

GRAHAM HUTTON CAIRNS

"Scotch"

This good-natured, red, or rather light-haired Scotchman dropped in with us in the fall of 1916. Since then he has lightened our lives with his "heather" humor, except for a few months when he was a first class, second "Louie" in some co-ed college in the mountains of Carolina.

EDWARD LEO CASEY

"Ed" "Case"

This always wears a flannel shirt and a stupid grin and answers to the appellation of "Case." It is said of him that when he first came to college he had no idea who was referred to when a professor called on Mr. Casey. Once he visited Rome and there did as the Romans didn't.

HERBERT RYERSON
CAMPBELL JR.

"Herb"

Here we present Peckertown's proudest product. In Prospect Park he is considered their choicest celebrity. Next year "Herb" says that he will make the football team, and any who have played against him agree with him.

EARLE VAN ARSDALE CONOVER

"Connie"

Connie was called from his profession of fishing at Asbury Park to the more arduous life of intellectual labor. His life at Holy Hill was so strenuous that he has now taken up his residence on Bartlett Street.

JAMES PATRICK CORRIGAN

"Jim"

Jim comes from the iron section. He was blasted and tempered in the furnaces of Franklin Borough. Although it makes him sick, he maintains that Cut Plug is essential to a chemist.

ARCHER DURYEE CROOKS

"Archie"

He comes from the ancient settlement catalogued Round Hill Road, Greenwich, Conn. While he is at college it is a dull time, especially for the ladies. He has the reputation among the fair sex of being such a fine young man, but with an appealing, innocent look.

JAMES JOSEPH CURRAN

"Jimmie"

This Lilliputian was the class recluse and the college bell-boy, altho' now he is just the relic of an overseas outfit. We predict a great future for Captain Curran as a policeman if not a soldier.

WARREN JOHN JOSEPH DARWENT

"Buck"

Julius Adolphus, the second Rutgers youthful impressario, hails from Cranford. The neighbors out there persuaded him to try for West Point, which he did. However, he is still here, because, as he says, he has a murmuring heart.

ROBERT RITTER DAVENPORT

"Davy"

An exceptional expounder of Cicero's principle from "Tusculanarum Disputationum" that "the diseases of the mind are far more destructive than those of the body." Davy can trot a Greek Horse in about 2:30.

ARTHUR RUNYON DAYTON

"Art"

The greatest literary genius in Rutgers, according to Dayton. He would not write for the Targum because he was sure that he would get on, and then the great burdens entailed would rest on his weary shoulders. Art would like to fall in love, but, like Lecraw, doesn't know how.

MYRON RAYMOND DEAN

In the Ag Club picture he was sure he would be reprimanded for wearing a soft collar. Reports from the front are that, when at a dance hall, he insisted that he was a quick learner in the art of "watching."

JOHN WILLIARD DEWITT

"Johnny"

Until this year he was the only shoot of genius to spring from that blasted spot of Oradell. His aim in life is to ruralize city life so that the rest of the world will compare with his home town.

FRANKLIN REED DULANY

"Duke"

It is said that the nurse from Wells Hospital has been ruthlessly cast aside for a colleague from the Woman's College. Duke is very methodical, even to the point of coming late to all classes.

RICHARD WHITE DUNHAM

"Dick"

A big boy, but really quite harmless, except in football. He goes fussing sometimes and takes engineering. He attended two meetings of the "Civils" and that organization was discontinued.

HERMAN ELKAN EISENBERG

"Eisey"

This tiny specimen of the chosen race chose Rutgers for two reasons: (1) Scholarship. (2) Easy commuting to Rahway. He wished to be confidential advisor to the faculty. Reed Silvers had better look out.

ANDREW FRANK ESCHEN-
FELDER

An intellectual prodigy, according to his own opinion. Any afternoon, rain or shine, he may be seen running around the gym track; that is, when he is not in the smoking and grill room of the Engineering Building.

HARRY DAVID FEINBERG

He is unsurpassable when back seats are to be nabbed. Except for this flaring vice, we would scarcely know he existed.

ERIC FLEMING

"Rusty"

Red has been visiting all the modistes' shops to get models for his so-called art. As you look at his pictures, you realize there is little danger of any of them becoming, not in the near future, of course, Mrs. Fleming.

SOLLIE HERBERT FLITMAN

"Flit"

Another city bird who has answered nature's call. He pursues an Ag degree. He realizes that it is not pursuing him. The college is indebted to him for improvements on the farm.

LOUIS DOUGLAS FOUQUET, JR.

This is the alchemist with the trick moustache. We hope he will keep it until this book is published. To young girls he is the real maple sugar. Without a doubt he is the handsomest man in the University.

WALTER EDMUND FRANKE

"Pic"

"Von Hindenburg speaks in English, but makes love in German." At least that is what Dr. Newton tells us. After his strenuous life here he will benefit some Western University with his presence. Success, Walter.

ELI FRANKEL

A noted Psychologist, who is preparing at great pains and expense a book entitled "The Workings and Missings of the Faculty." We saw him at his best at our Sophomore banquet when he was trying to pour water through the hole in an olive.

MAX HAROLD FROELICH

"Maxie"

The breach in the class decorum. In him are combined all the graces of Bossuet, Whittfield, Moody and Savanarola. He has great ideas, but they will never materialize. Oh, yes. He was at Plattsburg last summer.

KENNETH CROMWELL HAND

"Ken"

His peculiar delight is public speaking, in which he is quite as enticing as a soubrette, attracting those who wish to hear to the front seat. Outside of political genius, his chief endowments are a deep bass voice, dexterity with the violin, a pool cue, and a resemblance to the Grecian athletes.

CEDRIC ASHLEY HICKMAN

"Ted" "Hick"

Leo the Fourth is not a student, but a man of affairs. He plays the triangle and one piece on the piano, and said he was taught in Asbury Park.

JAMES WILLIARD CHRISTOPHER HOULIHAN

"Happy"

Arrived with a cranium covered with sea weed and the wicked smile of a siren. The "Bridge of Sand" Corporation, Long Branch, is awaiting his graduation.

JOSEPH ADOLPH HOWARD

"Joe"

Joe is needed on the wrestling team on account of that bulldog tenacity, for he has all his profs securely by the knees.

WILLIARD LUNGER HULTS

"Doc"

Something between a hindrance and a help. He spent a year at Colgate, but left that institution because he was overworked.

RUDOLPH FREDERICK ILLIG, JR.

"Ruddie"

Illig gave N. Y. U. the benefit of a year of his life, which is not remarkable in view of his present overflow of knowledge. He claims all second lieutenants at Camp Grant, Ill., drilled as privates! Then they would know all about it.

JAMES DRAPER JACKSON

"Jim"

The spirit of wisdom. To listen to Jim you would never think that he comes from the South. Next year he is going to run for president of the Knockers' Club.

JOHN HAROLD JOHNSTON

"Johnny"

A small gay town in the wilds of New Jersey is responsible for this. Johnny is a very peculiar specimen (you can tell that from the picture), and the only one of his kind in the University. He is always ready to air his opinions on any subject, from theology to the refining influence of women in society.

FRANK BENEDICT KELLEY

"Kell"

Frank isn't large but he is quick. He is particularly noted for his gentleness on the football field. Behind the plowshare in New Canaan and a twin-six in New Brunswick are two different things. Eh, Kell?

DAVID KELLY

"Dave"

This sober lad once played a fife in the New Brunswick thousand dollar drum corps. He's a whirlwind on the track, but he wouldn't try for the varsity. Dave's motto: "Everything once."

RUFUS EDGAR KLEINHANS

The bacon of Perth Amboy and a shining light of the chemist society. He is contemplating a sojourn in Paris after his graduation, principally to mingle in the elite of high-brow society.

LEBER

If he were ever seen around the campus we would be able to say something, but we must profess our inability.

LORING ROSS LECRAW

"Lecky" and "Lightlunch"

Arrived with a hungry look and a turkey-like walk, and the smile of a seraph, and a correct imitation of the muscle dance. He has been known to burn the midnight oil so that he might get the key. At first the girls think him as cute as a cherub, but on further acquaintance they denounce him as a double-eyed deceiver.

WALTER COLBURNE LETSON

"Bud"

Bud comes from Stelton. The place was formerly called Farmer, but it did not quite satisfy the aristocratic taste of Bud, so he had it changed. To really appreciate him you should hear him read poetry. How about it, Prof. Hale?

JAMES KNICKERBOCKER LOSEE

"Jim"

New York State, Upper Red Hook, the seat of Red Hook chewing tobacco (How about it, Rod?), to be exact, sent Knickerbocker to try all the cinch courses at Rutgers. In his Freshman year he bought a pack of cigarettes; since then he has been making a collection. With his motor cycle and "Tank," he makes life miserable for Prof. Moore and the rest of the faculty.

PAUL WOOLMAN LUKENS

"Luke"

Luke spends his time in the pool when not at the farm. He plays second fiddle in the Haydn Orchestra, but when it comes to the ladies, he wants to play first fiddle or none. He was a superb blacksmith in the Navy.

MORTON KEMOL McWHOOD

"Mac"

Mac failed to impress the Newark branch of the N. Y. U., so he came to Rutgers with his knowledge. He once threatened to throw a Prof. out of College, but was persuaded to let the matter drop by his wife. Quite the noisiest thing in the University.

SCARLET LETTER

GEORGE ADRIANCE MEAD

"Rosy"

Rosy is another authority on all matters, whatsoever. Would you think him a heart breaker? Well, he isn't, but teaching fair beings in summer school and regular visits to our "She College" fool some people. He has a note book system of conversation.

CHARLES METZ, JR.

Really, this hope of Troy was once a parlor lizard. On occasion the Duke expounds the theory of the full and unlimited coinage of picturesque expletives with great zest.

CALVIN CHRISTIAN MEURY

"Cal"

Arrived with a weakness for the weed and a passion for music. He intends to inflict himself on the ministry, but if he goes to it as he does basketball he will be some preacher.

EDWIN ROBERT MEZGER

"Dutch"

His College career was begun at Cornell, and a few of us expect him to finish it here. Dutch believes that he would have become a real "Ace" had the war lasted. Newark is too near for him to do much studying.

ROSS HEYLMUNN MINER

Ross came to us from the class of '19, after having served in the Hospital Corps, U. S. A. We believe that he went into service mainly in order that when he returned he might join the best class that Rutgers has ever had, namely 1920.

WILLIAM EAGLESON MUTCH

"Bill" or "Eagle Eye"

Bill has been a growing bud, and few in college knew of him, until suddenly he blossomed forth and draws the admiration of the crowd by his excellent performance in center field.

HAROLD M. NEELY

"Hal"

Nell keeps a secretary to inform the girls in Brooklyn of his dazzling career. His genial nature, coupled with his fussing instincts, won him a place in Franklin society. He has a "right good time" wherever he goes.

JOSEPH CHARLES OXLEY

"Joe"

Ox is one of the original 57 varieties. You have to see him to appreciate him. His rash tendencies were shown once when he exclaimed: "Gimme a soda, Louis; I wantta feel tough. See?"

PRESTON KINNEY PACKARD

Dancer? Yes, mechanically. Home-wrecker? Sure, so she said. Pretty? She thinks so. Deceiver? Well, I can't marry them all. Complexion? The girls envy me. Clever? I'm a pretty sly mug. Bright? Got radium beat. Destination? ?????

FRANK ABRAHAM PLAIN

For three years Rustie's dashing styles have made Rutgers men sit up and take notice. Alas, when he graduates (?); but what is our loss is Perth Amboy's gain.

CHARLES WALTER RICE

"Walt"

Ever since "Walt" came to college he has gone into everything with heart and soul. We were moved to tears when he was on the Glee Club; we cheered for him when he tore up the track in his dashes, and we were brought to our feet as he played basketball.

MICHAEL FRANKEL RUBIN

"Rube"

Mike is fearfully and wonderfully made. Is happy when discussing the benefits of Monoratic Prohibition. His ambition is to marry and raise "hawgs."

WILBER FOWLER RUE

Oh, ship me back to Allentown
While I am to be had;
Society will ruin me,
And Ag has made me mad.

MEFFORD ROSS RUNYON

"Mef" returned to college to rest after his weary life in the army. He still preserves that purpose.

AMOS HOWARD SAXE

"Germany"

Amos hopes to take the platform for Woman Suffrage, but at present is lecturing on "The silence of the bean can be combined with the nutrition of the clam." We feel that his peculiar talents will make him successful in any field.

BENJAMIN HOWARD SCHLAIN

"Kid"

This Alchemist used to be called Bennie. It is now to be understood that now his nickname is Bert. His motto is: "Some love two and some love three, but I love one, and that one is me.

LEONARD AUGUSTUS SIBLEY

"Len"

Twice Gus has been known to have smiled since he came to college. Once when Dr. Demarest made a slip in grammar, and the other time when Thomas came into the Library. His spare time is devoted to Russian Democracy and Animal Eternity.

ROBERT HENRY STAHL

Here to rest and to further his intellectual development. A worshipper of Lady Nicotine, who aspires to be a lawyer.

LELAND LEE TALIAFERRO

"Leal"

A product of a seaboard town, who goes to classes when his duties and athletics permit. A good all 'round fellow who plays baseball as he shoots baskets. His success is due in large part to Dr. Payson's motto: "Squeeze 'em."

GEORGE EDWIN TALMAGE, JR.

"Tal"

Tal resembles a prehistoric giant who has dwindled down to a shadow. Alas, he is expected to be a minister, a second Luther; but we who know him better doubt it. His excess energy for the past year has been lost in editing this book.

HAROLD CUYLER TAYLOR

"Zack"

The Orange Mountains sent this fair-haired, rosy-faced, innocent youth to teach us to play the banjo. He is a youth of great promise, even though he studies Ag. His country accepted his services, but the boys called him such rough names that he took his pistols and returned to Rutgers.

HOWARD HAINES THOMAS

"Tommy"

Tommy came here to brush up his math, but did not find Annie Lit possessing all the charms of which he had dreamed. When through college he expects to go on a missionary trip to visit the Mormons.

PIERRE DUCLOS VAN MATER

"Duke"

We inherited Duke from the Class of 1919. He hasn't been long enough with us for us to appreciate him, but we have reasons to believe that there is some one who does, and that one very much. A farmer's life is a hard one, Duke.

ANSON WILLARD VOORHEES

"Buck"

Another gift from 1919, or was it 1918? Anyway, we are glad to have such a learned person with us, especially one who keeps not his knowledge to himself. Whenever you want a date, go to Buck, as he has a card index of New Brunswick and vicinity.

FOSTER MAHLON VOORHEES

"Smiler"

A commuter, but a social light when in Trenton. He even plays the bass drum. Smiler is a dispenser of petrified chestnuts. A collection of these is being made and will be published shortly under the title, "Old Smiler's Joke Book, or Echoes from Antiquity."

RICHARD SHEPARD VOSE

"Dick"

Under the guidance of his better half (?), who follows, Dick frequents the Gym, drinks Bevo, and cultivates the acquaintance of the manager of the Opera House. Between times he stains his fingers in the Lab. You would never think he was a minister's son, would you? Allentown, Pa., makes a good week-end trip, eh, Dick?

RODNEY SEAGER VOSE

"Rod"

The best man in the class. At least, so he claims himself at times. But as a rule he is a good companion, especially after 9 p. m., when he gives up fooling and gets to work. He has favorites on the faculty, and among the ladies, but his treatment of them differs.

FREDERICK HENRY WAITZ

"Hank"

Fritz has become so meek at College that he wishes to offer himself as food for the cannibals.

HOWARD SPENCER WILCOX

"Bill"

When Bill came to college a shadow of a girl would turn him pale. His timidity is well illustrated in his reply to a young lady who said she was delighted to meet him. After a short pause: "Oh, you're welcome." He is very fond of flowers and dissecting checkers.

JAMES CONRAD WEISEL

"Jim"

Wyckoff, New Jersey, is to blame for this owner of three jitneys and a restaurant. Jim is the only one who doesn't understand why strangers pronounce his name "Weasel." Has his life here been a success, is what is troubling him.

Alla garro, garroo, garray,
Alla garro, garrun,
Alla garro, for Rutgers,
Rutgers '21.

History of the Class of 1921

ENTERING in the Fall of 1917 as a body of a hundred and seventy students, the Class of 1921 grew rapidly smaller. Man after man, instilled with the red blood of Americanism and with the spirit of old Rutgers, entered the service, and when it assembled for the Sophomore year only a hundred and thirty-four had returned.

Then came the S. A. T. C. into which the class put its whole spirit. With but the meagre military training of the previous year, the men took their positions as non-commissioned officers and brought glory to Rutgers and praise from the commanding officers. Still men continued leaving for training camps and it looked as if the Class of 1921 were doomed. But lo! on the eleventh of November came the armistice, bringing brighter prospects for the future and regret that everyone had not been able to do more in the great fight.

Then came the mustering out process and the new year promised great things for Rutgers and the Class of '21. January second saw twenty men of the class re-enter college activities. Let us note here that of the 24 men in the service, one, Norman Bloodgood, "gave his last full measure of devotion" to the cause for which he fought.

But brighter prospects are ahead. On the college man of to-day rests a greater responsibility than ever before. The Class of 1921 realizes this fact, and the scholarship of the new term shows it.

September, 1918, saw a happy bunch of Freshmen—no rules and no "pesky Sophs." But on January second the Freshman came into his own! It was rumored that at two o'clock the "Procs" would go up. But from eleven to early morning hours, the bright yellow manuscripts, with their wealth of language, were being placed on the campus boundaries. The Freshmen, better trained than the average, from their four months' visit, were on hand, but daylight saw many a "Proc" still intact. Unlike their predecessors, 1921 awoke some new ideas. Green bands appeared on the arms of the Freshmen, and yellow identification tags dangled from their buttonholes. For two weeks these yellow cards dotted the campus, while their owners were learning the traditions and customs of old Rutgers and finding out that it was detrimental to their health to linger on Queens Campus.

Rushes followed. Chapel rushes? Yes! The Freshmen, strong in numbers, endeavored bravely to keep their yell going, but often 1921, although weak in numbers, caused that yell to subside. But with all their training the Freshmen were fast asleep. Their stomachs demanded too much of their time. Walking peacefully out of the chapel one noon, '21 calmly assembled on the steps of the gymnasium, and the camera clicked as one brave Freshman lay under a worthy Sophomore for his boldness.

But the great achievement in class rivalry came about after a three days' conflict with the Freshmen, when, on March third, the class sat down to a banquet in the Washington Restaurant in Newark, with its own president at the head of the table and beside him the Freshman president. Once more the Freshmen had been outwitted, and for the first time in thirteen years a Sophomore banquet was held with both presidents there. Driven to desperation, the Freshmen called upon the law, and, with the aid of detectives, rescued their president, but in doing so broke all the traditions of old Rutgers. Notwithstanding this breach of the unwritten law, memories of an excellent banquet and fine speeches will ever remain in the minds of the class.

Then came the night when the class invaded Ballantine Gymnasium with the "fair sex" and enjoyed a dance unequalled by any Sophomore hop ever staged.

The Class of 1921 is proud of some of its men who brought honor to Rutgers on the gridiron. It has representatives on the baseball, track, swimming and tennis teams and in all literary circles of the college. The managers of the football and basketball teams, respectively, prepared excellent schedules for these sports.

With the same spirit that the men of 1921 went into the service, the class will go through Rutgers carrying with it the determination to "keep the Scarlet in the van."

Rutgers, Rutgers' '22.

History of the Class of 1922

The Class of 1922 entered upon its college career with an enrollment of two hundred and forty-three men, the largest Freshman Class known in the history of the college. This was due in some degree to the establishing of the Students' Army Training Corps at Rutgers. During the three months that the college was under the control of the Government several men of the Freshman Class were sent to Officers' Training Camps. Among the gold stars in the service flag is one which calls to memory Leo L. Franken, '22, who died here in the service of his country. Shortly after the disbanding of the Students' Army Training Corps, Sykes, '22, passed away while at his home.

At the beginning of the second term, after the return from the Christmas recess, the Freshmen Class had lost almost a hundred of its members. College life now began in good earnest for the Freshmen. Within a week after the reopening of college the "Proc Rush" was held. The classes of '21 and '22 met in combat for the first time. In the early evening, and again at midnight, the classes fought, with '22 triumphant. To the credit of the Class of 1922 stands the fact that nearly fifty Sophomore "procs" were stolen by the Freshmen and posted face down and bearing the numerals "22." About two weeks after the "Proc Rush" the Freshmen, upon leaving Chapel, gathered together and gave their yell until stopped by the upper classmen, who realized that the Sophomores, who did not appear, had shown the white feather.

Because of the Students' Army Training Corps, the customary Freshman reception was omitted during the first term.

The Class of 1922 has already proved itself to be a class which will stand among the foremost in athletics. Those who have seen some of the Freshmen in action on the 'Varsity football team realize how well they deserve to wear the Scarlet. Basketball, with its quick thinking and playing, has not been too fast a game for our class, for an entire Freshman team was substituted for the 'Varsity in one of the contests of the season. Many of the class are out for track, baseball, swimming and tennis.

As the Freshman Class looks back over the year just passed it sees the shadow of the class which, in the three years to come, shall bring glory and honor to its Alma Mater and to itself.

Athletics in the College

PROF. M. A. BLAKE

THE subject of athletics in general in the colleges is of particular interest at this time, and especially the subject of the athletic coach. College men throughout the country won the respect of the nation by the way they responded to the call for men to form a great army for duty overseas. To the colleges as institutions for the training of young men is also due much credit for the quality of manhood which they have fostered. Officers assigned to the training of men in Officers' Training Camps have again and again praised the adaptability of the college man and his response to discipline.

The advantages most frequently claimed for intercollegiate athletics are that they encourage students to engage in physical exercise, that they are a means of promoting college spirit, and that they are a factor in maintaining active alumni interest in the institution.

The athletic coach is commonly regarded as a man who is an expert in teaching skill in play.

The college is often spoken of as an institution of learning, and there are many people who believe it is a place where young men go simply to obtain principles, facts and some training in connection with chemistry, physics, history or law, and fail to appreciate the larger function of a college.

I believe a considerable number of people who sit in a stand at a college football or baseball game regard the team as a collection of individuals of some athletic ability who, by constant practice under skillful direction, have developed team work. Yet anyone who comes in touch with college athletics soon recognizes that the success of a college team depends as much upon the ability of a coach to judge, modify and harmonize temperaments and traits of character of individuals as upon teaching them skill in play.

The function of a college is not merely to train a man to absorb facts and principles, to think clearly and logically or to become skillful in manipulating a test tube or a triangle and T square. It is the function of a college to impress upon young men the need of developing and conserving their physical strength, to help them recognize and strengthen their weak points, to foster a spirit of democracy and service to country and its institutions. In other words, to train them to become worthy leaders of men.

A freshman class presenting itself at college in September is represented by a great variety of temperaments and traits of character. The following are likely to be included in the group:

The sluggish individual who may be capable of considerable development if given extra attention and special instruction.

The lazy boy who may succeed if he can be aroused.

The "sulky" one who has been petted at home and at the preparatory school and allowed to have his own way until he is in danger of becoming permanently spoiled.

The nervous boy who burns up his energy and lacks poise and balance at critical times.

The quick-tempered individual who lacks self-control.

The egotistical one who fails to recognize his faults, and who has an exaggerated opinion of his virtues.

The weak, easily influenced one who is really a slave to one or more bad habits.

The faint-hearted boy who loses courage before a difficult task or problem.

The "trouble-maker" who delights in stirring up differences between individuals and groups of individuals.

The careless one who lacks responsibility.

The awkward man who is clumsy in his movements.

The sensitive boy who is deeply hurt by even mild criticism.

The dishonest one who is ready to advance his own interests or those of his institution by unfair tactics at the expense of honor and reputation.

The selfish individual who lacks the spirit of service and helpfulness to others.

There may also be individuals in a class that are unsolved problems to their parents, and they are sent to college with the hope that the institution can mold them.

The attendance of a student at a series of lectures where he listens to an instructor for a number of stated hours and then later takes a written examination is not likely to have much influence upon his character. In fact, in some of the larger institutions an instructor in a subject may never be able to associate the faces of his students with their names because of lack of contact with them. One reason why some of the small colleges are so successful in turning out trained men is that the instructors get close to the students and come to know them intimately.

The athletic coach is in a better position to know and influence some of the students than any other instructor in the college or university. He must, of necessity, know each member of a team intimately. He has the further advantage of giving instruction in a field of much interest to his pupils. It is a well recognized fact that young people can often be best "reached" through the medium of their play.

If the right spirit and attitude prevails at an institution, it is an honor to represent the college as a member of an athletic team, and, besides, there are the trips, the chance of "winning the letter" and the associations.

The position of athletic coach is, however, far from easy; in fact, it is one of the most difficult of all the branches of instruction if it is conducted with the success it should be. Too often the permanence of his position depends almost entirely upon his ability to win games or upon his ability to "stand in" with certain fraternities or groups of students. Too often he lacks the support of men connected with the college in an official capacity who are interested enough to study the work of the coach and the athletic teams in order to be in a position to adjust differences fairly.

When any considerable number of men present themselves to a coach as candidates for a team all of the traits of character previously mentioned as being present in a freshman class may be represented, and it may be more difficult for him to teach some of them to become successful players than for an instructor to teach them to become good students. The nervous boy may take excellent notes at a lecture and prove to be a good student and yet be a poor batter for the college nine until he is able to obtain better control over his nerves.

The quick-tempered individual may show a fine attitude toward his work in the classroom and yet be an unsatisfactory football player, due to his tendency to forget team play and strategy in an effort to "get even" with an individual opponent.

Individuals with bad habits are sometimes excellent students, but uncertain athletes, because they lack stamina and endurance.

It is true, of course, that certain men make excellent athletes with comparatively little effort upon the part of the athletic coach and yet prove to be poor students, even under capable instruction, because they lack serious purpose. And as a general rule the efficient student is the easiest athlete for the coach to teach and train.

The fact that intercollegiate contests are commonly public affairs at which students, faculty and the public attend, and where a man's traits of character stand out in full view, is a powerful factor for character building in the hands of a competent athletic coach.

The sluggish boy may explain his failure to secure passing marks in the classroom upon the basis of inefficient instruction, but if he confuses plays in a football contest or leaves his base and is tagged out in a ball game he finds that explanations do not help his case even among his close friends.

The "self-centered" individual who attempts to make all the scores in a basketball game is likely to hear shouts of "Shoot! Shoot!" from the spectators whenever he receives the ball at any point on the floor.

The faint-hearted one finds that he must build up his courage or the whole college will soon know that he lacks it.

The most earnest and skillful player may occasionally make mistakes which bring forth much adverse and perhaps unjust criticism from the "stands" and the students, yet he will find later in life that it is an asset to know how to accept such situations gracefully.

There can be little doubt as to the value of properly conducted intercollegiate athletics in the training of college men.

There are many, however, who believe that the desired results are not being obtained, and are seeking a remedy.

One of the weak points is that athletics are too frequently conducted as a distinct feature, and often too little attention and thought is given to the relation which they bear to undergraduate morale.

A second weak point is that the position of athletic coach has not been such as to attract many men of marked strength of character to adopt it as a life work. Laws are of little avail unless they are properly administered. Rules for games do not prevent rough play except when enforced by a competent official. The athletic coach should be a man of sterling character, and the work should be raised to a level that will attract such men.

Quite recently there has been criticism of the seasonal coach, or one employed for a short period, and there is some basis for it. If an athletic coach is the right man in the right place, his influence should be extended throughout the year. The strict training required of members of a team during a season of play accomplishes little if at the close of that season bad habits are resumed.

A short term coach may vitalize athletics at an institution if he comes with the prestige of a man successful and respected in his field, and is one who is interested in seeing young men make the most of their opportunities while at college. In other words, it is a question of the man more than of the system.

The athletic coach who is successful in teaching skillful play, but who is "out to win at any cost," who lacks honor and character, can in a short time establish an attitude of play in the college that is objectionable and certain to bring discredit and ill-feeling between colleges.

Athletics should be so conducted as to supplement the other departments of the college in the great work of training men, and the right sort of athletic instruction and guidance will develop among the undergraduates an attitude of play that will demand the best which any individual has to give, a spirit of striving for victory until the very end, yet a spirit of fair play to all opponents that will win their respect and admiration. Such a college morale in athletics has an influence for good in an institution that is hard to measure.

Review of the 1918 Football Season

CLIFFORD N. BAKER, '20

THE football season of 1918 has ended, and, we may say, very disastrously for Rutgers. Yet as we review the season we find that it was the little points, the obscure details, that turned the tide against us. We were defeated in our last two games surely and definitely, and Rutgers will never deny an honest defeat, yet we can easily see how little she deserved these two reverses.

Practice started ten days before the Ursinus game with nine of last year's 'Varsity squad on the field. Ursinus was defeated by a 66-0 score, which showed very plainly that Rutgers had the foundation of a great team. Ursinus had not a strong team, yet they fought hard throughout the game, and it was only by consistent endeavor that Rutgers was able to compile 66 points. Much credit must be given to the defeated eleven for the hard game they put up with a green team.

The set-back at the hands of the Pelham Bay sailors was a valuable lesson for Rutgers. This hard-earned victory by the narrow margin of 7 to 0 gave the necessary impetus to bring the team to its senses. It cannot be denied that Pelham had a good team, yet most writers concede that Rutgers was far below her normal form. Two reasons can be given for this lack of form. The first and most apparent was the lack of a strong scrub team that could be pitted against the 'Varsity. The other was the Hooverized training table which the team thought was far more bare than Hoover had ever dreamed of. Yet this game with Pelham was a very valuable one in respect to later events.

After this game the influenza quarantine came, and there was no game for three weeks; but the team practiced faithfully during this time, and Coach Sanford was able to iron out the many wrinkles which were apparent in the previous games.

The coach's work during the three weeks of forced inactivity was very much in evidence when Rutgers met Lehigh. The protegés of Tom Keady came to New Brunswick fresh from a well-earned victory over "By" Dickson's League Island Marines, a combination that defeated the University of Pennsylvania. The score of 30 to 0 may appear an easy victory, but it was nothing of the sort. No one can criticize the fighting spirit of the Lehigh team, and her defeat can be explained very simply—Rutgers was running very smoothly and making every play count. The team had passed mid-season form, and was coming into its own.

On the following Saturday the Naval Transport team, of Hoboken, appeared in New Brunswick, led by Brickley, the famous Harvard drop-kicker. The team was composed of an all-star combination from which a hard game was expected. Rutgers, however, had little trouble in winning by a score of 40 to 0.

The team traveled the "weary twelve-trail" to Penn State on Penn State's Alumni Day. The trip was long and tiresome, and the men played far below their normal form, yet Penn State was defeated 26 to 0. Until this game Rutgers had not had a first down scored against her by rushing. One first down was scored by Penn State. This is the one time during the season that Rutgers and Pittsburgh may be compared. Pittsburgh defeated Penn at Pittsburgh by a 29 to 7 score, having her goal line crossed for a touchdown. From this comparison it can be seen that a Rutgers-Pittsburgh game would have been a great battle.

On November 16 occurred the greatest football upset in the decade. Quoting a New York paper: "The Scarlet Scourge at last is stopped. Foster Sanford's great Rutgers eleven, which for two years has trampled and trodden in the dust the football elite of the East, finally has met its master. Not only has the dreaded scarlet-shirted band that made the little Jersey college famous been beaten, but it has been driven in utter rout." Rutgers cannot and will never deny this defeat, yet many reasons can be given for the disaster. First, Rutgers missed the "Thug" Rendall spirit. The drive was there and the ability, yet the team lacked the "I will not be denied" spirit. Coach Sanford can teach the method and inspire the men before the game, but he cannot play the game itself. Second, the use of a great many substitutes by Great Lakes. Third, and least important, the crippled condition of the team when it took the field. Bad ankles were the worst, due largely to cutting down from behind. Nevertheless the score of 14 to 54 does not show the superiority which Rutgers possessed during the first half of the game. Not one first down was obtained against her by scrimmage during that time. The two excellent runs by Driscoll were the only chances of a score, and they were 60 and 87-yard runs, respectively; yet the great machine cracked, and we must abide by the result.

With two weeks in which to prepare for the Syracuse game, which had finally been arranged after much effort on our part, the team hoped for a fine come-back. Yet when the game was played there was something lacking in the Rutgers line-up. It may have been mental attitude, lack of unity, or what not, but nevertheless much credit is due Syracuse. Probably the most noticeable feature of their work was the way they followed the ball. It is enough to say that her three touchdowns were scored on recovered balls, and each touchdown by a linesman. The way in which Syracuse got down the field under punts was also very commendable. Although Rutgers gained thirteen first downs by scrimmage and Syracuse three, Rutgers was squarely defeated.

It is greatly to be regretted that Paul LeRoy Robeson should end his football career with two of the worst defeats that Rutgers has ever experienced. "Robey," recognized by close critics of the game as the greatest and most versatile player of all time, possessed what is known as "football instinct," and was able to fathom the attack of every opponent with lightning-like quickness. And, more than this, he has won his "R" in every branch of 'varsity athletics. He has, moreover, been elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and is one of the best orators in college, having won the Junior Oration in 1918.

That Captain William Feitner, characterized by Coach Sanford as a "sweet tackle," and one who played a great game as roving tackle, should end his football days thus is also unfortunate. It can be truly said that very few plays ever went through Bill.

Neuschaefer and Breckley, the two remaining Seniors, were hard players at all times. "Neusch" was probably best known for "hanging knobs" all over his opponent; Breckley, for hard tackling and catching of forward passes.

Two better halfbacks than Kelley and Gardner would be hard to find. Kelley possessed an evasiveness and a bore that could not be stopped. He tore up every line that he faced. Not only on the offense was he exceptionally effective, but on the defense as well. Gardner, a 195-pound back, had a terrific smash. He could tear open any line he hit, and was as effective in interference as in carrying the ball.

The line work of Rollins deserves special mention. With "his nose on the ground" he was able to hand out a lot of football to the man opposite him. In Francke and Dunham Rutgers has two good centers. Although Francke was injured most of the season, he played in the most important games, and was probably the best passer Rutgers ever had. Of the other men, all of whom deserve credit, Mount, at tackle, and Summerill, at fullback, played consistently. The former, a Freshman, filled acceptably the gap left by Rendall, and the latter did the punting for the team. French and Kull were backfield timber of the highest calibre, both fast and gritty, and possessing natural football ability which promises great things next year. Redmond, Keiler, Higgins, Duffy, Dunn and Ackroyd, completing the list of substitutes, did their parts well when called upon.

Just a few words in appreciation of George Foster Sanford, the greatest of all football coaches. All credit is due him for the fine showing made in the past six years. Football is method, and not men; and it is Mr. Sanford's method, and not men, that has made Rutgers famous. While Mr. Sanford is known to the majority of Rutgers followers by his football achievements, to those who are in closer contact with him it is his character, efforts and results that stand out. He is a man among men, always willing to help and advise. For six years during football seasons he has spent his entire afternoons at Rutgers. That his results are phenomenal no one can deny. He has raised Rutgers from a mediocre position to the very top. The members of the Rutgers teams will remember him as an exceptionally great man and adviser, a mold of the character of his men. Coach Sanford is an advocate of clean play—not only in football, but in life. The enviable reputation which Rutgers possesses for clean, hard play and excellent conduct on the field may be justly traced back to him.

Just a final word, showing the strength of the 1918 Rutgers team. One of the New York papers, commenting on "Pop" Hart's published statistics, said: "'Pop' showed us some dope yesterday which proved to our satisfaction that if all the plays made against Rutgers by the first five teams it has faced this season were to be made continuously—that is, one team taking the ball at the point where it was left by the preceding one—it would be advanced only 18 yards. We doubt if any other eleven in the history of football—not even the point-a-minute machine of Michigan or the 480-to-0 Yale eleven under 'Pa' Corbin—approached such perfection in defense.

"Ursinus, first to play Rutgers, not only failed to gain, but at the end owed twelve yards. This was made up with two yards to spare by the Pelham Bay sailors. Lehigh added six yards and made it eight. Brickley's Naval Transport team added six more, and Penn State added four, making a total of eighteen yards. In five games the opposition made eighty-seven line plays and twenty-one forward passes. If scrimmage gains alone were considered, the ball, according to the above formula, would be six yards behind the starting point."

It may be said in addition that, with the exception of the last half of the Great Lakes game, very little was gained. In the first half Great Lakes didn't get a first down by scrimmage. Syracuse got but three during the whole game, so, in spite of its defeats, this year's team may be considered very nearly impregnable on defense.

Baseball Season 1918

BECAUSE of the early closing of college the baseball season was not as long as those completed in normal times. Six games were arranged by Manager Ferguson with Ursinus, Cornell, Union, Fordham, Colgate and Lafayette. Of these games played, four resulted in victories and two in defeats.

Under the faithful and careful guidance of Coach Cox and Captain Lyons a very fast combination was moulded together which consisted of four men from the 1917 team and a wealth of good material from the strong 1917 Reserve team.

The first team to meet Rutgers at home was Ursinus. It resulted in an easy victory, the Scarlet winning by an overwhelming score of 10-1. The next home game was with the strong Cornell combination. After one of the hardest fought battles of the season Cornell emerged as victors by the score of 6-4. This game was enjoyed by a very large crowd and although Rutgers was defeated, yet all were satisfied in that we had a fine team.

The first trip of the season was the ever popular boat ride to Schenectady where Union succumbed to the Rutgers onslaught to the tune of 5-0. Good pitching on the part of Rule and timely hitting featured for Rutgers in this game.

Fordham was next to be met at New Brunswick. The New Yorkers brought a large and noisy delegation of rooters with them, and all were out to avenge the football beating handed them by Rutgers in the fall. From the start it could be seen that the teams were very evenly matched and the game was to be a nip and tuck affair. This happened to be the case, but with Fordham coming out of the fray on the long end of the score, 8-7.

The next two games with Colgate and Lafayette resulted in victories for Rutgers. In both these contests our timely hitting and the use of the "squeeze play" with deadly effect were features.

The prospects for the 1919 team are very bright, namely Captain Lyons, Wittpen and Wilkins only, will be lost by graduation. The men returning from service as well as some strong material from the Reserve team and in the Freshman class promise to fill these vacancies.

At the time of this writing the schedule for the 1919 season has been completed and contains fourteen games with some of the best colleges and universities in the East. A very successful season is predicted.

The schedule for 1919 to date is:

April 5	Open
April 12	N. Y. U.	Home
April 16	West Point	Away
April 25	Syracuse	Home

LAST season added more victories to the long list of the Scarlet. The track schedule was necessarily shortened because of the early closing of college but this did not prevent a successful season, the team winning both of the dual meets held. The season was started with the Penn. Relays but the relay team was unable to place. Undaunted by this setback the team defeated Swarthmore 67-53 in the first dual meet. This was followed by another victory, New York University being vanquished 66-46. A full team was not sent to the Middle States Conference but every man entered succeeded in winning a place. Breckley, '19, succeeded at this meet in his attempt to break the College and Meet records and at the Intercollegiate Championship raised the college mark to twelve feet.

A successful season is expected for no men were lost through graduation and those of the team who were in service have returned. Several men in the Freshman class have come with a great reputation so that Captain Bellerjeau feels confident that he will have a team worthy of representing Rutgers.

CAPTAIN NEUSCHAEFER

MANAGER MOLINEUX

Basketball 1918-19

PAUL LEROY ROBESON, '19

(Editor's Note.—Paul LeRoy Robeson is one of the best basketball players in the college. At center he has been of inestimable value to the team. His natural physical abilities, combined with his excellent head-work, mark him as one of our best players of all time.)

UTGERS basketball made a decided advance this season and, though losing three of nine games, took a place in the front rank. On the whole, the season was a great success. The interest in the sport was evident throughout, both of players and student body.

At the beginning of the season six letter men remained: Captain Neuschaefer, Meury, Robeson, Kelley, Breckley and Taliaferro, a fine nucleus for a beginning. Unfortunately, Kelley contracted a light case of pneumonia, and was lost to the team for most of the year. This was a severe blow, as Kelley is without doubt one of the headiest and fastest of college basketball players. Coach Hill, undaunted, looked over the Freshman material for a real fast man, and found him in French, the ex-Pennington star. The Freshmen produced other good men in Boudinot, Bosquet, Abbot, Keiler and Dettlinger. A fight began for positions, and the success of the team can be attributed in no small degree to the uncertainty of the situation. Every man had to fight and fight hard to keep his job.

The first game at N. Y. U. resulted in a victory for the Scarlet, though the team naturally was not in the best of form. The team work was very good, but the shooting was away off. The Rutgers combination revealed to the spectators Coach Hill's new system of playing the backfield, and it worked to perfection. N. Y. U. played a hard game under Captain Egan, but the Scarlet maintained a safe lead to the end. Meury's work was very commendable, his passing and shooting pulling Rutgers out of many tight places. The final score was 18-15.

The next contest at Princeton resulted in an undeserved defeat. Rutgers failed to play anywhere near its best form, and threw away many opportunities to bring home the victory. The first half ended 14-13, but in the second half our team weakened, and Princeton triumphed, 28-21. Gray and Opie played best for Princeton, while Meury's phenomenal foul shooting featured the Rutgers play.

The Colgate contest found Rutgers attaining her form, and the up-Staters were easily humbled by the score of 37-21. The passing and shooting of the home combination was superb, and the results of Frank Hill's fine coaching were forthcoming. Taliaferro was all over the court, and dropped in six from the field and seven from the chalk line.

Manhattan College was a practice game for the home combination, and for a while it looked as though the New York boys would not score at all. The first half ended 36-2 and the game, 48-11. A whole Freshman team took the floor early in the second half and played a fine game.

Now came the game of games—the return match with Princeton. The Rutgers combination put up the greatest game of the year, but the jinx was still around, and the Tigers finally won, 22-20, in an extra five-minute period. With the score 20-11 and only 10 minutes to go, victory for the Scarlet seemed sure; but the breaks of the game were against her, and with 25 seconds to go Opie, the speedy Princeton forward, tied the score. The same ubiquitous person finally won the contest for the Tigers by dribbling half the length of the floor and swishing the cords for two precious points. It was a hard game for the team to lose, but all did their best.

The following week found the Scarlet-clad warriors invading the lair of the Bull Dog at New Haven. The game of the week before seemed to have taken the "pep" from our men, and they lost a listless game by a 29-24 score. The team was away off color, and had it been in any kind of form would have easily defeated their opponents.

Contrary to the general rule, our team played one of its best games the day after the Junior in defeating West Virginia 44-22. The mountaineers never had a chance against the superior team work and shooting of the home quintet. They were hopelessly lost. Rice, who had joined the squad the previous week, used his speed to advantage, and fairly burned up the court with his greyhound dashes. He slipped in five from the field.

The Swarthmore contest was a good hard battle with Rutgers always on the safe end. The Quakers fought hard to stave off defeat, but it was no use. The Scarlet would not be denied.

The final game of the season, with Lehigh, was very unexciting. The visiting team was inclined to be rough, and the home team was not up to its best. The final score, 30-20, found Rutgers on the long end. This marked the last basketball contest for Captain Neuschaefer, Robeson and Breckley as members of a Rutgers team.

The season brought out some fine prospects for another year. French should become a valuable man as should the remainder of the Freshman combination.

Meury played a fine game throughout, his over-head shots and his passing bringing forth applause again and again.

Captain Neuschaefer, the other guard, played a heady and steady game, leading his men most acceptably.

Taliaferro led the team in scoring, and proved himself one of the best basketball players developed at this time-honored institution.

Breckley played well when given an opportunity and Rutgers basketball has lost a good man in Joe, whose "fight" and energy were always apparent.

The team's success was due primarily to the wonderful coaching of Mr. Hill. Hill knows all there is to know about the game and the men this year showed a fine knowledge of the game. The support of the student body was excellent, cheer-leader Rice getting his men together in great style.

Another year should find old Rutgers at the top of the heap. A number of old stars are expected back and with this year's team practically intact, we should go through the whole season without a blot.

QUEENS CAMPUS

VARSIITY SWIMMING TEAM

Rutger's Swimming 1916-19

SWIMMING as a varsity sport first became prominent at Rutgers when the present Senior Class were freshmen. At that time the management of the team was not under the Rutgers Athletic Association and it was only by the strictest economy that the sport was kept alive. Now it is quite different. The Athletic Association recognizes swimming as one of the most important minor sports and does everything in its power to place the team in the foremost rank of the colleges. We have not always been victorious in our meets but Syracuse, Amherst, Williams, C. C. N. Y., Swarthmore and Princeton have good reason to fear Rutgers' swimmers. It was only recently that Princeton's proverbial luck carried her to a victory in the relay race and meet by only six feet, all but breaking the record in her desperate effort to stem the tide of Scarlet victory.

Rutgers' aquatic success has been due chiefly to the unceasing efforts of one man, Coach Reilley. Only those connected with the team can know and appreciate what he has done for swimming here at Rutgers. Even if we have not defeated Princeton, when we have a coach who can instill his fighting spirit into a team and develop such stars as Captain Lukens, Lefurgy, Wolff, Sumerill and Redmond, who shall belittle our swimming team?

Tennis Season of 1918

ALTHOUGH the tennis season was short, the team managed to get in six matches. Of these we won three, tied one, and lost two. When Captain MacWatty called for candidates late in March he was confronted with a rather discouraging proposition, as only one veteran from the year before besides himself was in college. The team had one day of practice before journeying to New York to play Columbia. Here they were swamped 6 to 0, but individually it was a good match, as the separate scores were close. The next match, with Lafayette, on our courts was scarcely better, losing 5 to 1. Our third match was played with Princeton at Princeton. This resulted in a tie, 3 to 3. The upper half of the team, Boocock and MacWatty, came through finely, winning all their matches, but the lower half, Brandt and Higgins, lost their matches, and so tied the score. This match was the turning point of the season, as the team came through in fine shape, winning from N. Y. U., Stevens and Johns Hopkins.

The team was composed of MacWatty, captain; C. B. Boocock, Brandt, Higgins and Butcher. It was managed by DuMont. MacWatty was re-elected captain at the end of the year and Boocock, manager.

THE WOMAN'S COLLEGE

SCARLET LETTER

New Jersey College for Women

WILLIAM H. S. DEMAREST, President

A.B., A.M., D.D. (Rutgers); LL.D. (Columbia, Union, Pittsburgh)

MRS. MABEL SMITH DOUGLAS, Dean. A.B. (Barnard)

MRS. ELIZABETH NICHOLAS GREEN, Registrar

The New Jersey College for Women was established by the Trustees of Rutgers College April 12, 1918. The Legislature of New Jersey at its session in 1917 designated the State College, maintained by the Trustees, the State University of New Jersey. Under this title the providing of facilities for the higher education of women seemed appropriate, meeting a long-existing need and widespread desire in New Jersey for such privilege. The College for Women was therefore founded as a department of the State University; it began its work September 18, 1918. It is located on property newly acquired for the purpose adjacent to the College Farm and one mile distant from the Rutgers College Campus. Its staff of instruction is composed of professors and instructors from Rutgers College and others exclusively serving it. The Library and certain other facilities of Rutgers are available for all the Faculty and students, the department being in effect an affiliated college.

The establishment of the College for Women is another step in the building up of the State University. Starting with an entering class of fifty it already shows signs of rapid growth. Expectations point to a far larger freshman class next fall.

Throughout the past year there has been much coöperation between the two institutions. The Women's Dramatic Club united with the Queen's Players in giving a joint production of Barrie's "Quality Street" on April 27, at the High School. The performance was a great success, and the advantages of a mixed cast will doubtless cause this policy to be continued. Several dances have been given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. to the Woman's College and in turn the latter institution has held college and class functions, at which large numbers of Rutgers men were present. The feeling of friendship is growing fast, and we wish the New Jersey College for Women as long and glorious a career as that of Rutgers. May it grow to be as ancient and renowned and as loved as the "little old college that stands on the hill!"

WITHIN three months after we had come to know it, the S. A. T. C. was a thing of the past, condemned on every side as a colossal failure. In our own case academic standings took a decided drop, but the primary object of the organization was to train men to be officers, and in this it was successful as far as it went—which, we must confess, wasn't very far because of the fortunate termination of hostilities. When Lieutenant Torpey took command in September he and his assistants were confronted with the problem of making soldiers out of men of whom a larger number had not the faintest conception of military life. Within the space of a few weeks they had wrought a complete change. The battalion, completely uniformed, presented the appearance of a body of well-drilled troops; from the simple school of the soldier it had advanced through the successive stages to the intricacies of European battle formations. It spoke well of the efforts of the officers stationed here, and to them is due no little credit for the results achieved.

In October a spirited Liberty Loan drive was held which resulted in a total subscription of more than fifty thousand dollars. The rivalry between companies was intense, with first one company and then another leading. Company B eventually went over the top with $13,200, a subscription only $300 greater than that of its nearest competitor. Subsequent discharge was the cause of many cancelled subscriptions, but a considerable number of bonds were retained by those who were able to do so.

Early in November ten men, chosen for special ability, were transferred to the Officers' Training School at Camp Lee, where every Rutgers man who lected to remain for the entire period of training was commissioned. The signing of the armistice was a matter of keen disappointment to five others who were called back when almost in the very act of boarding the train for Camp Hancock.

For the rest it was a more or less monotonous existence—arising, retiring, eating, drilling and studying at the sometimes melodious, sometimes raucous summons of the bugle. K. P. duty was an unwelcome diversion, so frequent in its appearance that it also was monotonous. A threatened court-martial, or arrest at pistol point while enjoying the terpsichorean art, furnished a subject for serious thought on occasions. Again, it was vaccination or anti-typhoid inoculation that thrust its unpleasant effects upon our consciousness. On the other hand, there were incidents of a different sort, and ones not entirely devoid of humor. There was the time when our tall lieutenant rent his nether garments while climbing a wire fence to hold converse with two of the fair sex; and, again, the capture and disarmament of our smallest (excluding the office force), though not, for that reason, least important, lieutenant in the midst of playful badinage with the sentinels of Company D.

Now that it is all over, and we can look back with at least ordinary impartiality, there appear to be no causes for real regret; on the other hand, we can find much that gives us satisfaction, even if it be only so mercenary a thing as the discharge bonus.

It is the function of the Senior Council to discuss matters pertaining to the general welfare of the college. Recommendations made are presented to the student body, the faculty, or the Board of Trustees for consideration. Meetings of the Senior Council are often attended by other undergraduates as well as by members of the faculty.

TARGUM CABINET

The Targum, 1918-1919

1918-1919 marks the fiftieth anniversary of The Targum. Founded in 1867 as an annual, its need soon became such that in 1869 it was changed to a monthly. Soon it began to appear bi-monthly and then every week. As the college has increased so the work of The Targum has increased.

The present staff has endeavored for the most part to make The Targum a true representative of undergraduate life. But it has tried to do more than that. It has felt that while The Targum should express the voice of the undergraduate body, it should also endeavor to influence that body by editorials written by men whom the student body has elected to compose its staff.

The Targum has just passed through a stormy but unique anniversary year. The uncertain days of the S. A. T. C. made Targum work especially difficult. But the added work was well worth while, for The Targum, acting in the rôle of a directory and a guide to college life, aided in preserving as much of the old college spirit as was possible.

Another difficulty which had to be overcome was the filling of the vacancies on the staff made by men entering the service during the summer. When roll was taken in the Fall of the men who had returned, it was found

ALTHOUGH the President and several other members of the cabinet were away from college in different branches of the service, the Y. M. C. A. work incident to the opening of college was started with the usual vigor. During the Summer the New Student Committee had gotten out the 1918-1919 Handbook, one of the best editions yet published, and the usual helpful program for the incoming Freshmen was carried out.

The advent of the Student Army Training Corps on the first of October and the consequent turning of the college into a military training camp brought a change. The work of the Association passed under the direction and control of the National War Work Council of Young Men's Christian Associations of the United States, the Executive Secretary became a "war work" secretary in uniform, and a program similar to the Y. M. C. A. program in the army camps was inaugurated. The Y. M. C. A. room in Van Nest Hall was turned into a reading and writing room, with newspapers and magazines, free stationery, post office facilities and a phonograph with records. The weekly program included "movies," entertainments, Y. M. C. A. talks, and occasional lectures and addresses.

With the passing of the S. A. T. C., however, just before the holidays the work of the Association went back to a more normal basis. Members of the cabinet who had been in the service returned to college and took up their work as before. The usual Tuesday evening Bible classes were organized in the fraternity houses and dormitories with a new course of study on "World Democracy" and with emphasis on the discussion method. The meetings on Wednesday evening were resumed with an unusually good line of speakers. During the month of April these meetings took the form of a "World Problems Forum." Excellent talks were given by different speakers on topics of world interest, and an opportunity was given at the end of the meeting for discussion.

During the S. A. T. C. régime the Student Employment Bureau was for the most part inactive. With the change back to normal conditions, however, its work was resumed, and jobs were secured for practically all men who were in actual need of them.

With the enlarged program of the S. A. T. C. days as a background, the activities of the Y. M. C. A. here at Rutgers have assumed a wider scope than ever before. The weekly "movies" have been continued, several informal dances have been given on Saturday evenings in the Gymnasium, "song fests" under army camp song leaders have been arranged for, and a third annual "Stunt Night" was gotten up.

While it is well understood that the spiritual growth and development of the students is the primary concern of the Association, it has, nevertheless, come to feel, as a result of its activities during the war days, that nothing that makes for the welfare and happiness of the students need be beyond the pale of its jurisdiction.

The Philoclean Literary Society was compelled to abandon temporarily its activities during the first term because of the military control which directed the college life. However, when Rutgers returned to a peace-time basis Philoclean immediately resumed its meetings. The Interscholastic Debating League again resumed its program through the effort of the student committee appointed from Philoclean members. The Society revived interest in collegiate debating, and took its customary position of prominent leadership in this activity.

During the second term Philoclean selected from those of the student body who exhibited special proficiency in literature a number whom it wished to honor with membership.

Philoclean turned its attention for the chief task of the year to the literature produced by the war. From the mass of writings which the war has brought forth Philoclean endeavored to select those worthy to endure. This literature was brought to the attention of the Society through articles and reading by the various members. Thus the individual received practice in literary composition and appreciation.

In spite of the slight interruption in the life of the Society when the college returned to its normal schedule, Philoclean Literary Society took its place in the activities of campus life.

Except for a slight delay in executing the program for high school debating, the war had no effect on the Rutgers Interscholastic Debating League. With the General Secretary, Mr. Voorhees, still in war work, the student committee started work with the resumption of normal college life. January fifteenth saw over a hundred and twenty-five delegates from the high schools throughout the State gathered in general conference. This was a remarkable evidence of the vitality of the work, especially when it is considered that practically no publicity work had been done among the high schools this year. The five years of the movement's life has taught many valuable lessons in organization and execution. The rules have gradually been taking definite form. This movement launched by the Philoclean Literary Society has won the co-operation of the State Department of Education, as well as captured the interest of the high school pupils throughout the State.

Season of 1918-1919

As directly opposed to last year's season, which, due to war conditions that we all understand, was a fight from start to finish, things this year are moving along easily and without the least effort. Our season begins late because of the delayed schedule of regular college routine, but by hard and faithful work the members of the two clubs are ready to run through a season which will surely bring credit to themselves and the college.

When we came back from the mid-year vacation it was first decided that there would be no musical clubs this year. This was a great disappointment to a good many, so it was agreed upon that work would start right away on the clubs and in no half-way manner. Mr. McKinney at once took the responsibility of coaching, and to him the greatest part of the success of the clubs is due. The ending of the war allowed a number of last year's talent to return, and with the excellent material at hand a fine group was chosen. The manager has had an unusually large number of requests for concerts, which assures the clubs of plenty of opportunities for showing their ability. With every condition favorable, this season is bound to be marked by a complete success.

The Rutgers Menorah Society, a branch of the Intercollegiate Menorah Association, was organized in 1913. Principally its purpose is to educate. It aims to satisfy an aroused intellectual curiosity with respect to the past, present and possible future of the Jewish race. It endeavors to enrich the common treasury of American ideals and culture with the spiritual resources of the Hebrew people.

The society is all-inclusive, non-partisan, and non-sectarian. Its members are men of divers convictions, private religious opinion being left entirely to the individual. Knowledge and service, which may be regarded as the very cornerstone of Jewish idealism, constitute the twin motives of the Rutgers Menorah.

During the past year a series of lectures was arranged by the Menorah Society. Men of prominence appeared before the organization, and the members themselves prepared papers and led in enthusiastic discussions. The work of this year clearly displays the progress which the organization has made over previous years in the matter of large attendance and interest displayed. The Menorah looks forward to even better progress in the future.

LITERARY

ERIC FLEMING

Yesterday

When the leafy boughs are waving
To the breeze's every mood,
And the carol of the song-bird
Breaks the golden solitude
With a music that is silver
And a glory that is sweet
And a memory of flowers
That are blowing at my feet:

There's a dream forever sacred
To the lyric that I sing,
Comes to me and calls me, calls me
Far across the world of Spring.

When the flowers that are crimson
And the hours that are gold
Come anew with scented shadows
That are brighter than the old,
And the brook, beneath the branches
Where the shattered sunlight falls,
Turns to glory, there's a whisper
Wakes my dreams of old, and calls:

Wakes them with a glint of laughter
On the verdure of the lane,
And it brings my spirit gladness
As it sings to me again.

When the violets are purpled
And the sun is on the thyme,
Then I know my dream will waken,
For the years are like a rhyme
You forget, but still remember
Must recur in rhyme again
With the shadows and the sunlight,
And the flowers in the rain.

For my dream, my dream is calling
To the youth I used to know,
To the long roads and the valleys,
To the fields of long ago;
And the feet I knew are silent,
And the singing birds are still,
Just the wraith, the wraith is risen—
With the river and the hill.

Summer Song

An Indian Idyl

In the rushes on the river
 There's a little birch canoe,
 Where the water sings forever,
 And the sky is always blue;
 There the wind, in whispered wonder,
 Makes a shadow out of care,
 And the sun, in shining glory,
 Makes the gold that is your hair.
 Turn your glory, laughing water,
 To the silence that is strong—
 Of the red chief and his daughter—
 Of my little Summer Song.

Summer Song, Summer Song,
 Oh, I know the days are long,
 And the maple tree is budded in the Spring;
 But the angels tell in Heaven
 Of the love that they have riven,
 Where my little Summer Song has taken wing.

Long ago, in Summer weather,
 I was paddling in the breeze,
 When I saw a little feather
 Bobbing shoreward through the trees;
 And the wind caressed me softer
 Than it ever had before,
 And my birch canoe seemed lighter
 In the rushes on the shore.
 Through the golden leaves of Summer,
 Through the gleaming mists of Pree,
 Came my little red-skin goddess,
 Came my Summer Song to me.

Summer Song, Summer Song,
 You were laughing, you were strong,
 And your brown skin knew the sunset tints of light;
 And your wondrous eyes caressing
 Were the shadows of a blessing,
 Like the twilight when the sun is lost to night.

Now my camp-fire is forgotten,
 And my weary fiddle still,
 And my little wigwam's lonely
 By the gravestone on the hill,
 For she went away forever
 To her happy hunting ground,

And she left me with a whisper,
 Like an angel homeward bound.
 But the water sings forever
 An old wondrousong of you
 In the rushes on the river
 By my little birch canoe.

Summer Song, Summer Song,
 Oh, I know the days are long,
 And the leaves are turning color in the fall;
 So, if there's a red-man's spirit,
 Sing my name and I will hear it—
 Then I'll come to you and bring to you my all.

Remembrance

Next door to me
 There lives an old, old lady; and I still
 Remember with what pride
 She sent her son away.
 Her garden is an old-fashioned, beautiful affair,
 Like Paradise in Summer—or Romance Road—
 And she is a rare, exquisite rose—a dream, one imagines
 As mutable—like the dreams that come unbidden
 Out of the fire-light and the smoke of an old pipe
 And the long shadows that fall athwart the hearth.

“Killed in action.”
 Now you know all there is to know—
 Except his youth and his blue eyes and his yellow hair—
 Except the poor little old lady who lives next door to me.
 Yet there is something about it that haunts me—
 Like an Autumn wind along the eaves, or the breath
 Of a forsaken valley among the hills of home.

One day she went out into her garden with a spade and a little tree—

An oak.
 She planted it there among her flowers,
 Her old hands patting every spadeful of earth into place,
 Her old back bent to the unusual task.
 And when she stood up—oh, the wind
 Caressed with an infinite softness her gray head,
 So sturdy and self-reliant she seemed.

* * * *

The wind talks in that tree now—
 It is an old, old tree.
 The slant sunshine of October days plays softly about it—
 Falling down accustomed ways.

"Killed in action."
 The old lady is dead now—
 But the tree is there,
 And I think his soul has come west.
 It could not lie there under an alien sky,
 But, traveling the long, poppy-decked Flanders road,
 Tossing away the mocking hands of a resistless fate,
 It has come back.

And every year in that forsaken garden,
 Near the house where the old lady tried so hard to raise a tow-
 headed boy to a man,
 When the sunclouds fall, at Vespers,
 The wind talks in that old tree,
 And the breezes whisper there.....

Songs and Flowers

From the kiss of a sweet sea wind
 I have fashioned a rose of song;
 From the ghost in the fire-light glow
 Where the ashes of empire throng,
 I have made an exquisite poem,
 Colored it gay with dream,
 Touched it with mist of the moonlight,
 Filched from a straying beam—
 And only a dreamer may see it,
 Through the crystal ball of his youth;
 Shall take it and call it a rainbow,
 Washed clear with the dew of truth.

* * * *

So I take this song and the poem
 And twist them into a spray—
 And, I pray you, accept such flowers
 In lieu of a real bouquet.

R. B. K.

The Lily of No Man's Land

I know of a wonderful lily,
It is dainty and slender and light;
Blue and cream, intermingled,
Fade on a background of white;
And a wonderful emerald setting
Is showing this jewel of a flower,
A plot of green with a brilliant sheen
Under a maple bower.

Sunshine and shade intermingled
Where crests of the maple lock,
And the branches sound with warbles—
Jays chatter and orioles mock;
And underneath the bower
Where the leaves of the maples wave,
The trunk-lines form two rhythmic rows,
Making a natural nave.

At the end of the nave is an altar,
And back of the altar an elm—
Better throne for a fairy queen
Is not in a fairy realm.
A hillock rising lightly,
Swelling up from the plain—
Such is the natural altar
At the end of the emerald lane.

Two years ago I found it,
This wonderful lily of mine;
It shone with ineffable glory,
Filled with a radiance divine.
Almost in front of the altar,
An ell or two from its base,
Raising its delicate stalk erect,
Lifting its glorious face.

Blue and cream and silver
 Flowed on a background of white;
 I worshiped it and I loved it,
 It seemed so slender and light.
 I nourished my little lily,
 I watered it every day,
 And I kissed the tips of the petals
 When I had to go away.

Almost two years since I left it
 I have come to the spot again,
 Seeking again the quiet spot
 Far from the noise of men.
 And, lo, the nave has been ransacked,
 The leaves of the trees are dead;
 The maples are felled, and the grass is gone,
 And my white little lily is red.

Red—with the gore of heroes,
 And its petals are bowed in shame
 For the holy things that have sunk in wreck
 In war's own terrible name;
 And I asked, "Who has harmed my lily,
 And this awful mischief done?"
 And the lily leaned with a passing breeze
 And answered—"The bloody Hun."

MY FIRST CIGAR

(Name of author suppressed by request)

I walked along the campus path
 One hazy autumn day;
 With head held high and sporty air
 I puffed and whiffed away.

And as the clouds of smoke poured out
 Like fog into the air,
 I winked the other eye and thought
 It was my first cigar.

But suddenly there came a change,
 And all around me swam;
 I clinched my fist and wrathfully
 Uttered a fervent "D—n."

But still, ye gods! I sicker grew,
 Up to my very hair;
 Alas! my trembling form proclaimed
 It was my first cigar.

And then I leaned against a tree
 With downcast eyes and sad,
 And thought, if I had never smoked,
 I would be mighty glad.

But still the thing burned on and on,
 Until I threw it far;
 And then I took a solemn vow:
 It was my last cigar.

WHEN WE WERE SOPHOMORES

Our Contribution Box

The SCARLET LETTER Board is in receipt of a number of contributions and suggestions from members of the faculty and student body. We regret that we are able to print only a few, owing to limited space.

From the Registrar:

Gentlemen of the SCARLET LETTER Board:

May I have the privilege to announce through your book that, beginning next term, no excuses will be permitted for the following reasons: Chronic illness on Saturday morning, dentist appointments, friends in town (take them to class), inefficient alarm clocks, cathartics and colds at speech time?

LUTHER H. MARTIN.

From Dr. Scott:

Gentlemen:

Will you kindly quote for me your advertising rates? I am just putting on the market a machine for condensing words and sentences, and would like to advertise through your pages.

DR. SCOTT.

From Dr. Whitman:

The Editor:

There are several suggestions that I would like to make for the conduct of the faculty meetings. 1, That Prof. Brasefield would remember that the waste basket is under the table, and therefore keep the window closed; 2, That Dr. Bevier would pitch his voice a little lower; 3, That Dr. Newton would make his suggestions a little less voluminous; 4, That Prof. Gage would cease to punctuate his remarks with "ehs."

However, despite these suggestions, Prof. Davis and I have little fault to find with our associates.

(Signed) WILLIAM HUNTINGTON WHITMAN.

From Prof. Charles Hale:

The 1920 SCARLET LETTER Board:

I wish that you would inform the other members of the faculty that the change of the chapel hour is for the best. Formerly Dr. Newton and I felt very lonesome in chapel, and at times, when the student body failed to give the hymn the necessary support, it was even quite embarrassing. I would suggest that "Ichabod" Graham be appointed as monitor.

PROF. CHARLES HALE.

From Titus B. Maxwell:
My Successors:

I am sending you three or four articles that I dashed off this afternoon. As you all know, I wrote most of last year's SCARLET LETTER. It is no effort at all for me to write, and if you need anything more, just let me know and I will be pleased to accommodate you.

(Signed) T. B. MAXWELL.

From Melville T. Cook:
Gentlemen:

For some time past, as you know, I have been interested in co-education. As I have repeatedly told all my classes, I attended Leland-Stanford University, where I met the present Mrs. Cook. As the Woman's College has been established in New Brunswick, I wish to go on record and wish to urge that now is a fine time to establish co-education in this University. My opinions are shared by Johnny Wop, Johnny Logan and Johnny Thomas.

MELVILLE T. COOK.

Gentlemen of the SCARLET LETTER Board:

As I know that you will want to say as much about me as space will allow, can you not bring out the following points? 1st, It is ridiculous that I should be called "Kitty" when my real name is Hugh. This appellation must be dropped, as I have no desire to be mistaken for anyone connected with the stage. 2nd, For some time now I have been worried over my experimental work. It is noticeable that my experiments are not successful, and I realize that I am at a great disadvantage, due to the convenience offered, and I feel that allowances should be made for the lack of poise on the part of some of those who attend my lectures.

I would like to add that in the future in my department all examinations will consist of twenty-eight questions, and will cover chiefly obscure points not brought out in class. This has worked to advantage in my Physical Chemistry course. Wishing you success in your publication, I remain,

HUGH BYRON GORDON.

WHY EUROPE MAKES BIGGER CROPS THAN THE UNITED STATES

AVERAGE PRODUCTION OF EUROPEAN
CROPS IS AS FOLLOWS:

Wheat	33 bushels per acre
Oats	45 " "
Potatoes	199.84 " "
Cotton in Egypt	400 pounds "

Europe uses a Home-Mixed Nitrate Fertilizer containing 8 per cent of Phosphoric Acid and 4½ per cent of Nitrate Nitrogen.

AVERAGE PRODUCTION OF AMERICAN
CROPS IS AS FOLLOWS:

Wheat	14 bushels per acre
Oats	40 " "
Potatoes	97.15 " "
Cotton	185 pounds "

America uses a Fertilizer containing 8 per cent of Phosphoric Acid and 2 per cent of Nitrogen which is mostly unavailable.

The difference in yields is largely due to larger amount of Nitrate Nitrogen used in Europe per acre as NITRATE OF SODA. Our small American acre yields are due to failure to appreciate this necessity.
